As Fiona is unable to attend every Remembrance event across the constituency, her husband, Richard, will be attending the main Service on Remembrance Sunday morning in Congleton and laying a wreath on her behalf.

Fiona said:

'I am honoured to be attending so many important Remembrance events across the Congleton Constituency in my first year as the local MP.

The recent return of the Mercian Regiment, whose Homecoming March I shall be attending on Wednesday, and their losses in Afghanistan give Acts of Remembrance an added poignancy, this year.

I have the utmost respect for every single member of the Mercian Regiment, and their families, and I know this is shared by my colleagues in Parliament, for whenever the Mercian is mentioned in the House of Commons Chamber – which is frequently – the whole House immediately falls silent and there is an atmosphere of the deepest admiration and gratitude'.
